Negotiating the world as a new professional in a world that sometimes feels like it was made for someone other than you can be daunting, but you are not alone. Each of us has had to come to terms with addressing the "-isms" as they come up amongst and between our colleagues, our supervisors and even our subordinates. Come and join Francisco Salinas, Director of Student Diversity and Inclusion for Boise State University as he facilitates a discussion centering on what professionals from backgrounds like yours have gained from their own lived experiences. This is the discussion that was missing from the curriculum for so many of us and which we hope to bring to light in a new way for a more prepared generation.

SHPE Boise State would like to thank our Keynote Speakers! Thank you for joining us tonight!

Francisco Salinas - Director for Student Diversity and Inclusion

Francisco Salinas serves as the first Director for Student Diversity and Inclusion at Boise State University. The position was created at the request of students who were seeking to increase the level of influence and consistency associated with diversity efforts on campus. Prior to coming to Boise State University, he has worked for Washington State University as the Director for Student Support Services and prior to that he worked at the University of Idaho as the Director of Multicultural Student Services.

Lisa Sànchez - Boise City Council member

Lisa has extensive experience serving the community, whether it’s bringing Latina and Native American girls into Girl Scouts, advocating for human rights, or bringing civil legal services to low-income individuals. She was voted the first Latina to serve as student body president and vice-president at BSU, and was one of five women featured in the Idaho Statesman as a “pioneer of the future.” Lisa was the first Latina to run and be elected to the Boise City Council.
